Wesley and Manitoba Colleges May Merge

Winnipeg, Aug. 2.—There are persistent rumors in the city that Wesley and Manitoba colleges, the two leading and largest attended denominational colleges of Western Canada, have amalgamated as far as their respective boards can bring it to a head. This follows church union as carried out at Toronto last June, and would mean an institution with over 1200 students. Neither Manitoba or Wesley have principals. Dr. Patric was lost to the Presbyterians and Dr.
Sparkling to the Methodists, both by death. Acting principals have had charge for many months in each case.
Dr. Crumley, former pastor of Grace Church, Winnipeg, now of Vancouver, was almost selected by Wesley to be appointed to the vacant chair.

Now the long-looked-for is soon to be realized, and within another thirty days the citizens of the Metropolis will be able to rejoice over the fact of the merging of the rising another mammoth industry.

As stated by us previously the plans as approved are for a plant which will be the most moderately equipped in the west, even the storage buildings being larger than any building at present connected with manufacturing plants in this vicinity.

An aviator named John F. Bryant, of California, was killed by a sudden descent of his "plane" at Victoria on August 6th.

Colonel Cody, an English aviator, fell to his death on August 7th near London.

HOME COURSE IN FRUITS AND BERRIES

RASPBERRIES, CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES.

LE ROY CADY, and K. A.
KIRKPATRICK of the Minnesota Agricultural College.

THE raspberry will succeed on almost any soil, but it is a great deal of trouble. A north slope is the best. The presence of an abundance of humus in the ground is desirable. The best soil to use is stable manure, completely free from straw or foul seed weeds. Apply a fair dressing to clover or timothy seed in the fall and plow under. If the ground is already quite rich in nitrogen it may be desirable to grow a crop of rye or other grain previous to setting the plants or even to dispense with the manuring altogether.

It is desirable to plow in the fall and allow full weathering. If plowing must be done in the spring the top portion of the soil should first be thoroughly harrowed. In the spring, if the plowing has been done in the fall, as soon as the top of the soil dries sufficiently it should be dragged. Follow with a disk or spading harrow, the latter to bury the roots of the rye. Cover with a layer of well-rotted stable manure just previous to this treatment.

Time to Plant.

The upright or suckering varieties may set with good results in the fall. The black caps, or the tip growing sorts, must be planted in the spring. Well-rotted stable manure is derived from the tip plant.

Practicable raspberry propagation is done only by means of sucker plants laying them down in winter is always the best.

The plants should be limited. Fests and disease are usually not present or they are readily controlled.

Currants.

The currant must have a moist, cool soil. The best results are got on a strong clay loam or even on a stiff clay if it is in a good state of cultivation. Cool, dry exposure is best and comparatively low, but a hill, with some shade, will often be more desirable. Planting among orchard trees is practicable.

Plants.

Currants can be grown from seed, but the method is not used except by amateurs. Plants are usually purchased from nurseries.

The plants are grown from cuttings of the ripened wood or from layers. The cuttings are made from the current season's wood in August or September. The leaves have eight inches and are planted in well prepared garden soil, with only an inch above ground, four inches apart, in rows three feet apart. By winter root growth will have started and the plants will be well rooted and grow strongly. They should be kept well cultivated in the growing season to conserve the moisture. They are sometimes planted when one year old, but the best results will be obtained by allowing them to grow for two years before setting out.

The branches may be rooted by bending them down and covering with soil, leaving the tips exposed. After one season they should be cut loose, lifted and grown in nursery rows for one season before being planted out.

Practically all currants are cuttings of the clump, encouraging as many young shoots as possible and then mound soil in and about them to a height of eight or ten inches.

Planting.

In large plantations the best plan is the check system. In a single plant establish a hill and plant 5 by 6 feet apart. The hill is 18 inches high. Where continuous rows are used the plants should stand 5 by 4 by 6 feet.

Cultivation and Mulching.

The currant must not be cultivated deeply, for it is a shallow root plant. The necessary moisture must be maintained by continual surface cultivation or by mulching.

Ashe, parvus, straw and manure are used for mulching. Hardwood sawdust, if not worked into the soil, is probably the best. Apply to a depth of several inches. Manure, grass and straw are good materials for a mulch always at hand. The best method of mulching is to combine the application to the hills and within the row, where the continuous row is used. The space between the rows is cultivated.

Pruning and Thinning.

The plants probably require the best treatment and the largest portion of it on the two and three year old wood.

In practical field culture four to eight main stems are allowed to develop, and a system of renewing by cutting out the wood over three years old is adopted. The greater part of the shoots for this reason is dangerous to nip back the growing shoots in the summer season when they have reached about eighteen inches.

Harvesting and Marketing.

The currants, if to be sold, should never be striped when one is picking, for the stems are loose and extremely dry they should have earth placed over their tips with a spade or hoe. In late fall they will have rooted nicely. When laying down the canes for the winter a foot or more of the cane should be cut free and allowed to stick up, to mark the row.

Winter Protection.

Two methods of planting are to peg—-the hill and the continuous row. We believe the check hill system is better.

Cultivation.

Cultivation should be begun as soon as the plants are set, and should never be stopped while they are growing. The soil should never be allowed to bake or crust. The best tool is the horse draw shovel or fourteen tooth cultivator.

The patch should never be seeded down, nor should it ever be sown or sown over. If one wishes to ripen the berries in late summer, millet, oats or buckwheat may be sown thickly to take up the moisture in the soil. It is desired to enrich the ground for the coming year, soy beans or Canadian beans may be used.

Manure is sometimes used as a substitute for cultivation, but its success is doubtful.

Pruning and Thinning.

Not more than two shoots should be allowed to grow from each plant the first year. The second and succeeding years each hill of the suckering kind will produce a great many shoots. Only the strongest of these should be allowed to develop.

The drooping sorts throw out their shoots from the root near the crown. The treatment for the first year is similar to that for the suckering kinds. The second and succeeding years five or six canes should be allowed to develop. The canes which have borne fruit should be removed soon after the crop is harvested.

If one wishes to grow the berries without laying them down to winter the young shoots should have the tops pinched off them when they are about fifteen to twenty inches high.

THE GOOSEBERRY is generally quite hardy in the northwest and will stand along side the currant. The propagation and planting are the same as for the currant. In fact, identical treatment may be given it with the following variations:

The production will be larger and the size and appearance of the fruit will be better if one third to one-half of the new growth is cut off each year.

The berries may be picked when the fruit is ripe, a pick being used in the left hand with some pickers to spread or hold the bushes apart. They are marketed in the ordinary quart boxes, although in some localities the large English sorts are packed in ten pound boxes.

The large western sweet cherries when ripened are removed soon after the crop is harvested.

If one wishes to grow the berries without laying them down to winter the young shoots should have the tops pinched off them when they are about fifteen to twenty inches high.

A Surprise For Her.

One of the greatest singers of France was returning from New York on a German liner. One evening, glancing at the program of the concert that was to go on that evening, she saw a simple march celebrating the German victory of 1871.

She immediately conceived that the selection of such a piece was an affront to her, and she expressed her disapproval at the proper time.

The captain noticed the great artist's agitation and glancing at the program to see what caused it; then, with a faint smile, he spoke to one of the waiters and said:

At the moment when the German triumphal march was due to begin the singer, who could not control her agitation, prepared to leave the ship.

The first chord was played, the artist was about to leave, but the singer, amazed, while the officers and other passengers also got up and smiled sympathetically at her.

And the band played "The Marsellais" instead.

Project Lesson.

Some years ago there was in a certain town a judge whose idea of the majesty of the law at the time of his accession to office were unbounded, and his sense of his own importance as the representative of the law was equally so.

At one time two persons quarreled in the judge's presence. One man struck the other, and the judge immediately ordered his arrest on a charge of assault and battery.

On the day of the trial the defendant paid his fine and was released.

Instantly the judge, who was a short, stout man, was on his feet, crimson faced, and puffing with indignation.

"What do you mean?" he demanded of the prisoner without any preamble.

"What do you mean by this?"

"What do you mean by this?"

"I am a soldier," he replied.

"Did you marry a widow?" the woman asked.

"Yes, madam," he replied.

"Were you ever blind, Mr. Evans?"

"No, madam," he replied.

"Did you marry a widow?" the woman asked again.

"Yes, madam," he said.

There was silence again while the inquisitive woman tried to solve the problem to her satisfaction. Failing to do so, she asked:

"Did not you marry a widow?"

"Yes, madam," he replied.

"Did you marry a widow?"

"Yes, madam," he said.

"How can it be that you never saw one of them, Mr. Evans?" asked the woman.

"Why, madam?" replied the man.

"One of them was born after I left," Harper's Bazaar.

A MODERN HERO IN WAR.

He Meets the Demands of Duty and is Greatly Honored.

The general beckoned to the aid. The man who had led the forces to a glorious victory of 1871.

"He is here, general."

The man came forward. The general unplied the medal from the breast of the coat and held it out to the hero.

"This is for you, brave fellow," he said, and his voice shook as he spoke as he extended his arm.

There was a sudden click.

"Thank you," said the strange.

"That ought to be first class. Easy, man, easy," he said, "thank you again."

The general stared.

"How is this?" he demanded.

"I am about to hand to you the jeweled emblem of surpassing bravery you draw a camera on me. Are you not a soldier?"

"No, no, I'm not a soldier."

Blairmore, Alta., Fri., Aug. 8, 1913

Some of our readers, who have been trying to cultivate the idea of patronizing home industry, claim that such is impossible on account of the inadequacy of the stock kept by the local dealer. In small towns throughout the west it is customary to keep in stock just such articles as are in greatest need and demand, and when anything special is required a person has to leave an order and wait for the arrival of the goods from the wholesaler, or pay extra for freight or express and other expenses which bring the price of the goods up to about double that for which the mail-order house could furnish it.

There is an urgent need of well-stocked, up-to-date stores in the Crows' Nest Pass, particularly at Blairmore, where large, bright and attractive business emporiums, well stocked with everything desired by a purchasing public, would command the local trade and offset the foreign mail-order business. There is no reason why Blairmore could not possess a successful mail-order establishment as well as Calgary or Winnipeg. We have the best business field outside of Calgary in Alberta—better by far than any prairie town which is depending solely upon the annual returns from the crop, which to a great extent is a game of chance, while in the coal field we have the resources from which constant development brings regular returns and big pay-rolls.

Until the local business folk study the conditions thoroughly and decide to cope with the situation and live up to the times by treating themselves to modern stores, modernly equipped, and giving the buying public the satisfaction of knowing that anything they require can be had at the home establishments, we cannot blame our people for patronizing the foreign business or mail-order house.

The rate-payers of the Town of Blairmore have wisely signified their desire to see the town live up to her opportunities and to see her civic improvements extended. Now that the funds will be available to meet all the town's liabilities in connection with the water-works and fire equipment, the next step will be to introduce the cement side-walks and paved streets. Blairmore is a beauty spot, and is bound to be the head-quarters of commerce and for those who desire to enjoy a holiday among the great masterpieces of natural scenery; but there is always room for improvement and every dollar spent will return the town and its citizens trifold.

It is time the Board of Trade or the Town Council of Blairmore would take steps to have the C.P.R. remove the barbed wire fence from around their property inside the town limits, and have it replaced by something less menacing. Blairmore is about the only town along the whole railway system that has permitted the railway to run their barbed wire inside of the town.

Severe blizzards have done considerable damage to crops in certain parts of Southern Alberta

CEASE BUYING FOREIGN PRODUCTS

The following sensible article is clipped from the "Wainwright Star":

"Canadians at this time recognized as the most critical in Canada's history for a good many years, should make an extra effort to keep all the money possible in the country, and cause as much as it is in their power to purchase the products of foreign labor. That Canada has been overtaking for the past twelve months is a conceded fact, and, furthermore, Canadian people have been importing to excess.

Every manufacturer should make a point of enlarging his foreign trade and every Canadian purchaser should turn his attention to manufactures produced in Canada by Canadian money and labor. Patriotic citizens will do this and will recognize that unless they do the result will be one of regret. An initial saving should be made by lessening the extent of foreign purchases. Unless a change is soon brought about, labor conditions must naturally deteriorate and in the majority of cases it will be seen that the laboring classes are the greatest purchasers of foreign goods.

When money is hard to procure, the practice of keeping money in the country should be more diligently practised than at any other time, therefore it will be observed by all loyal Canadians that it is about time to start patronizing home industry."

This congress, to which representatives came from every continent on the globe and which was probably the largest Forestry Congress ever held, met for the expressed purpose of studying economic and technical forestry problems, and the promoting legislative and administrative reforms in order to secure the conservation of the forests, the prevention of soil erosion and the reforestation of waste lands.

Such subjects as the right of the state to regulate private forest property, or to expropriate misused and denuded forest lands to insure public safety from floods were discussed from an international viewpoint. This state right has long been recognized in Europe where lands on water-sheds can be expropriated until as managed by the owner according to strict Government regulations and an adequate forest cover maintained. The Federal Government of the United States has also recently given expression to this right by the Weeks Bill, passed in 1911 for the acquisition of lands necessary to protect the watersheds and navigability of navigable rivers. By exerting a promptness and foresight, the Dominion Government has been able to forestall private occupation of the forest areas now reserved on the east slope of the Rockies and on other important watersheds, but should the necessity arise, its legal right to expropriate private land for the public benefit, seems to be borne out by

A feature of striking significance in this Forestry Congress at Paris, international in representation and international in its scope, was that this Congress was conceived, organized and brought to a successful conclusion by the Touring Club of France, a body having no direct interest in the promotion of Forestry. This club, composed of some most influential men in France, realized the esthetic value of the forest to the nation—a point which is almost entirely overlooked in Canada at present. If in Canada, as in Europe, our railways and national highways were bordered by beautiful tracts of forestland, instead of the bare, barren, dry, sweep wastes so prevalent at present, the money value of such an influence on the mind of the tourists would not be the least advantage to be derived from such forests.

This new steamer "Nasookin" of the Canadian Pacific Railway British Columbia lake service, was launched early this year. It is the same type of vessel that the company already has in service on the B.C. lakes and rivers, designed for passenger service, stern wheel and capable of making landings at any point. The steel hull was built by the Western Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company at Port Arthur, Ont., and the ship constructed at the company's own yards at Nelson, B.C., where several hundred men are employed. The vessel is 202 feet long with 39 foot beam and will carry 550 passengers, having sleeping accommodation for 170 people. It is fitted up with all the luxuries of the modern liner, ample provision being made for the preparation of meals and berths.

The steamer is now in service between Nelson and Kootenay Landing, connecting at each place with the company trains. The picture is one taken with the holiday crowd from Nelson going to Kaslo. The Indian name Nasookin signifies Big Chief.

Belle Vue Should

Incorporate

Agitation is growing stronger for the incorporation of the town of Bellevue, and it is expected that very shortly the matter will have ripened and Bellevue will attain a place among the town incorporations of Alberta.

Looking forward to the incorporation, several companies are being formed for the purpose of making application for a wholesale liquor license, and it is expected that the commissioners at their next session in this district will have quite a task to adjudicate upon.

There is no reason why Bellevue should not incorporate. At the present time she is one of the most prosperous mining camps in the West, and, like Blairmore, is destined not to be dependent solely upon the coal-mining industry for her existence, for lime and cement manufacture must assuredly be connected with the industrial enterprises of Bellevue.

Good Reason for His Enthusiasm

When a man has suffered for several days with a cold, diarrhea or other disease, with no relief, especially in the case of severe attacks, he is then cured sound and well by one or two doses of Chamberlin's Colds, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as sold by all dealers.

It is often the case, it is but natural that a man should be enthusiastic in his praise of the remedy, especially in the case of severe attacks, when he is then cured sound and well by one or two doses of Chamberlin's Colds, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as sold by all dealers.

A male quartette, consisting of Messrs. Watts, Goodwin, Gailor, and Davidson, and James Turner, sang very excellently at the Methodist church service on Sunday night.

William Cole is finding these warm evenings profitable for his ice-cream and soft drink business and Bellevue people appreciate the service he is rendering.

The new act came into operation this week, and it is hoped that it will work satisfactorily. The provisions of the act are all right; but they will be of little use unless they are carried out not in the spirit but to the letter. As workmen now have the power to appoint outsiders for the inspection of mines, workmen have complaints to make will not fear dismissal.

For the future miners must be paid fortnightly instead of monthly, which is a step in the right direction, and will tend to reduce the high cost of living on credit, especially when full time is not put in, as is often the case in collieries.

Women must work neither in nor about a mine, and youths under 16 cannot be employed. The act ought to work smoothly.—Newspaper.

Alberta Cabinet Changes

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 2.—Hon. C. W. Fisher, member for Cochrane and Speaker of the Provincial Legislature, is said to be slated for a position in the Cabinet with a slight readjustment of the Sifton Government. It is believed that he will be made Provincial Treasurer. He will probably be succeeded as speaker by Mr. George P. Smith of Camrose.

Michel Mines are Operating Again

Fernie, B. C., Aug. 4.—The Michel mines operated by the Crows Nest Pass Coal Co. were thrown open for work this morning, having been closed for a week, owing to an alleged grievance by some of the miners. There was a full turnout when the whistle blew for work this morning.

Extermination of Buffalo Threatened

Investigations carried on by the Forestry Branch of the Dominion Government have proven conclusively that several large herds of wild buffalo are still to be found in the hills country on the north boundary of Alberta, in the neighborhood of the Slave River. A party working under the direction of Mr. A. J. Bell, the Government Agent at Fort Smith, made a study of the habits and obtained photographs of these buffalo, which are identical in appearance with the former buffalo of the plains, the remnants of which were forced to seek shelter in the timbered fastnesses of the north.

These wild buffalo when fully grown are able to defend themselves against their natural enemies, but in winter before the young calves have attained full strength, they frequently fall victim to the timber wolves. Bands of these wolves however, around the flanks of the buffalo herds as they pass in single file, from one feeding ground to another, waiting for the opportunity to cut off a young animal and drive it from the herds, trail into the deep snow, where it is unable either to escape or to defend itself.

Parties of hunters were found by the investigating party which clearly indicated that the wolves were the cause. These gray timber wolves are of large size and are very numerous in this region, were they increase the existence, not only of the wild buffalo, but other game as well. The Dominion Government already offers a bounty of twenty dollars a piece for their destruction, but so scarce is inhabited in the region and so elusive are the wolves in avoiding traps, that the present bounty has had little effect in reducing their numbers. It is possible that the Dominion Government will raise the bounty here to forty dollars, in the hope of ridng the region of these pests and of preventing the extinction of the last wild bison in existence.

Agricultural School

About the first of November Alberta will open three high schools where agriculture in the most popular form will be taught. The pupils selected are this, Clarence, and Vermillion, all of which are separated by a goodly distance, so that the pupil population may be served conveniently. The greatest distance a pupil will be obliged to travel to attend these high schools is 200 miles, which in a land of distance is only a stone's throw. The agricultural college is an old established institution the world over. Alberta is experiencing with a system to bridge the gap between the elementary work of the junior grades and the full-fledged college. It is proposed to establish high schools before commencing an agricultural college. They will contain the most practical equipment, such as abattoirs, etc. Measuring and curing will be demonstrated, and the most progressive methods of farm management will be introduced. The instructors are described as "Ontario farm boys who succeeded in the west." The schools promise to be wide-awake centres, social and educational, for rural Alberta—Vancouver Province.
